

	Area of Improvement (1 point)	Meets Expectations (2 points)	Exceeds Expectations (3 points)
Response to Case Study/Assignment	The presentation responds to fewer than half of the requirements of the case study/assignment, and/or is poorly tailored for the intended audience.	The presentation responds to the case study/assignment and addresses the topic but has minor weaknesses with respect to less than half of the requirements and/or appropriate technical level.	The presentation responds to the case study/assignment and addresses the topic and all requirements at an appropriate technical level for the intended audience.
Analysis and Support	The depth of analysis and evaluation of the presented material is not sufficient to support the recommendation or does not align to leading practices, and discussion contains unnecessary or trivial material.	Presented material is analyzed and evaluated and appropriate supporting reasons, discussion of alternatives, explanations, leading practices, and examples are given for more than 75% of the main points.	Presented material is completely analyzed and evaluated, providing support for all main points with reasons, discussion of alternatives and tradeoffs, leading practices, explanations, and examples as appropriate.
Organization	The presentation is poorly structured; organizational flaws undermine its effectiveness and clarity.	The presentation is generally well-structured, with only a few flaws in overall organization.	The presentation is well structured; its organization contributes to its purpose. It includes an introduction, a body that expands on key points with supporting information, and a strong close with a call to action.
Style, Form, and Format	Presentation materials are not designed to effectively convey the information intended by the speaker. There may be typos, inconsistencies, and/or too much text.	The presentation materials are informative and generally supportive of the presentation but could be improved to complement the speaker's content more effectively.	The presentation materials are informative, well designed, easy to read, and complement the speaker's content. The number of slides is consistent with the time limit of the presentation.
Speaking Skills	Speaker is not prepared and must read from visual aids or cue cards, does not use voice, eye contact, or body language effectively to engage audience in topic. The speaker runs out of time or finishes significantly early.	Speaker is prepared and familiar with the content of the visual aids but may occasionally stray from topic, read from slides, or lack vocal clarity.	Speaker is well prepared, establishes effective eye contact with the audience, speaks clearly and audibly, and stays on topic. The speaker maintains a consistent pace throughout and finishes on time.